

I'm Not Lost!

It's spring! Wildlife babies are everywhere. Some babies look lost and alone. Does this fawn need your help? No! It is waiting for its mother. Just as your mother might have left you in your crib to make dinner, a wildlife mother must leave her baby to look for food. She knows where she left her little one. She plans to return soon. She may be watching nearby and waiting for you to leave. If you leave this baby alone, its mother will be able to feed and protect it, and teach it how to survive.

Please leave all wildlife babies alone.
